2022 Best Execution Practices Disclosure

How we keep brokerage costs reasonable for the investor

SunSage considers the full range & quality of service a broker offers when selecting a firm for its clients. Among other things, we study the broker's execution capability, commission rates, custodial fees, financial stability, and responsiveness. We are currently using Fidelity Investments as our approved custodial broker-dealer for client accounts.

- A. The brokerage firm selected offers accounts with a fixed $220 annual fee paid on a quarterly basis ($55 per quarter).
- B. The brokerage firm selected offers commission free or relatively low commission trades as compared to other firms across the industry.
- C. Lowest commission cost (commission free in most cases) is obtained from the selected brokerage firm when the client agrees to receive account & trade documentation electronically.
- D. In most cases, client accounts are traded on an individual basis rather than utilizing block trades. In the past, block trades might have lowered the impact of commission costs. With commission free trades, block trades don't necessarily add value and might risk biased trade allocation.
- E. SunSage's longer term investment strategies mean most portfolios will experience low turnover. Low turnover combined with low commissions should result in a low cumulative commission impact on client accounts.

SunSage monitors and evaluates competing brokerage firms on an annual basis to ensure the broker selected provides the client with the best mix of execution, service and value.
